What's that burrowing along the front sideline?

Our shaped, corrugated plastic ["coroplast"] sideline screens are inspired by the iconic 'sandworms' and immediately transport the viewer to a madcap world of fun and adventure.

Choose as many or as few as make sense for your ensemble's size and budget. Can be mounted to your existing sideline screen frames, or attached to a simple, DIY frame [plans available].

Shaped coroplast 'tombstones' add a touch of the zany macabre while also serving to close down the field for smaller ensembles to shine.

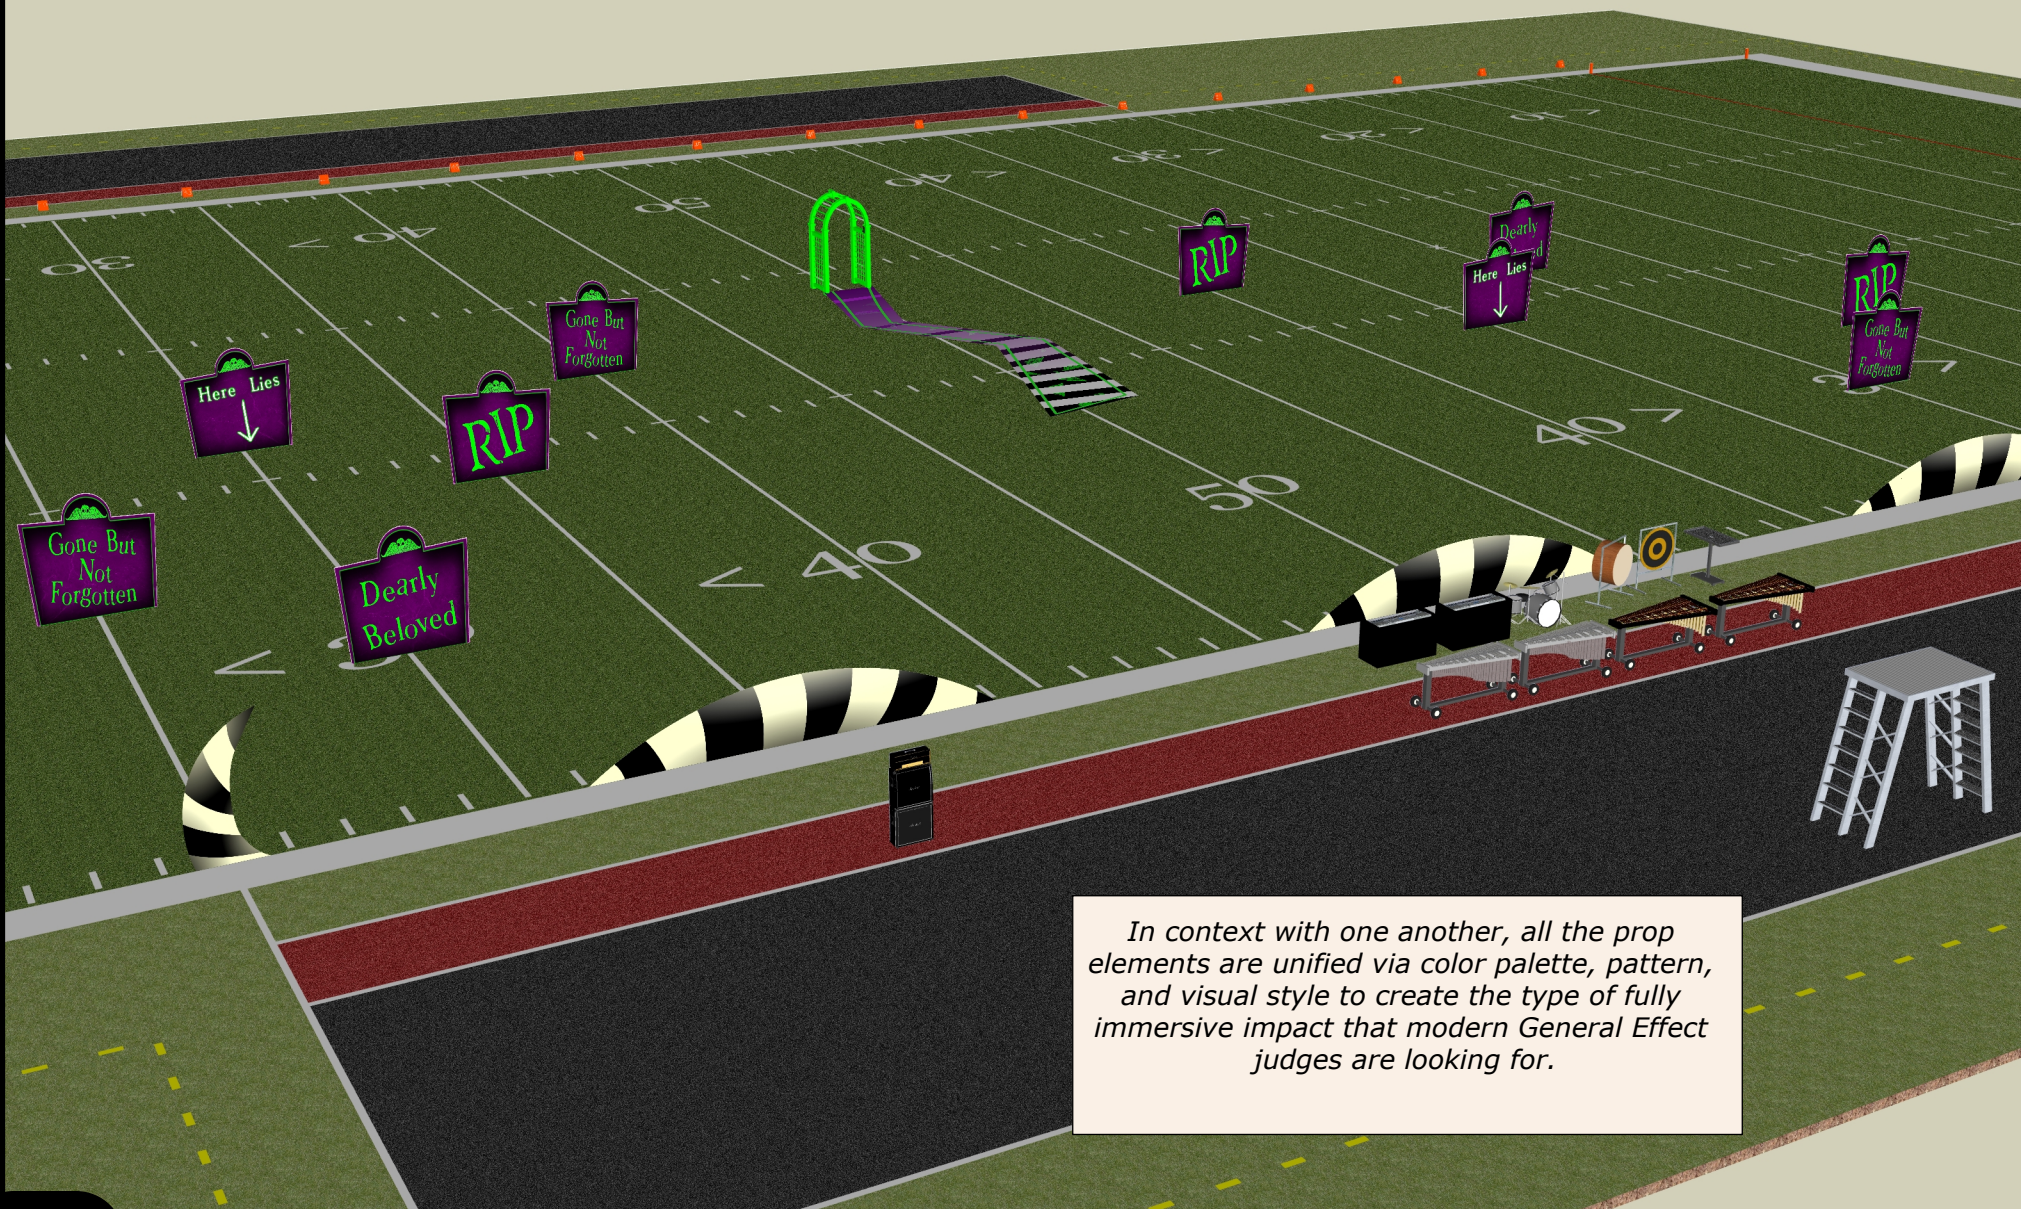

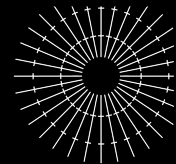

Use as many as makes sense for your ensemble's size and budget. Mount them on existing backdrop frames, or a simple DIY frame [plans available].

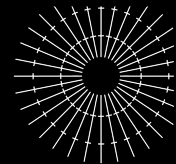

What's a wedding without an aisle to walk down? Choose a garden arbor--commonly available from any home improvement store--and combine it with our 'aisle' tarp for the climactic, show stopping moment.

Tarp delivered in three pieces and constructed on the field for ease of transport--some simple DIY required.

In context with one another, all the prop elements are unified via color palette, pattern, and visual style to create the type of fully immersive impact that modern General Effect judges are looking for.

Want the fully modern, contemporary look that full ensemble costuming can provide? Our simple, but highly effective musician costuming option can give you just that.

Notes on Products

Flags & Costumes

Sourcing	We partner with Digital Performance Gear [DPG], a leader in the industry, for all flags & costumes.
Art Fees	Art Fees are charged by DPG for the time-consuming process of laying out our designs on their printing templates. We avoid them wherever possible--such as with flags--but they are outside our control for costuming.
"Mini"	For costumes, DPG will send a 'mini' version of the uniform to the director's home address for final approval of colors. This is the last approval before a costume may go to production.
Turn Times	The listed turn time for your design is the estimated length of time from when your design goes to production until it is shipped.
Terms	IMPORTANT: a flag or costume cannot go to production until the design has had final approval AND we have received either a 50% down payment OR a school approved Purchase Order. Flags & costumes cannot ship without the remaining 50% paid, or an approved school Purchase Order. Purchase Orders should be paid within 30 days of delivery.
